Page Jackson has been a professional song writer, singer, bassist and performer since the mid 1980s. Page has signed multiple recording and publishing agreements over the past thirty years.

Page moved to Los Angeles with his band, Tone Poets in 1990. In 1993, he founded Mary Carves the Chicken. Ten CDs later, MCTC is still going strong. MCTC has three new records in progress. The band continues to play benefits for charity.

Over the past two years, MCTC has provided music for several video games. Jackson has done studio work as a bassist and vocalist--including the song, "A Reason to Change," for CLEAR. Jackson also played the doctor in "A Reason to Change." Page wrote and performed the title song "My Friend" for the award winning documentary, "My Friend: Changing the Journey." Jackson also does musical affirmations for people with chronic pain, or terminal illnesses.

Page spends his day as a career special education teacher, working with students who have disabilities characterized as severe. Jackson is also co-author to the children's tale, "The Hopeful Prince," and has been reading the book in various schools, bookstores and other venues.
